Coke Situation Shows Signs Of Improvement, Both as to Demand and Price Tendency

One Large Merchant Producer Sells Spot Foundry at $4.25 and $5.50.

SPOT FURNACE, $3.75-$3.90

Inquiries Becoming More General; Number of Merchants Ready to Resume If Prices Reach $4.00-$4.10; Impression That Bottom's Touched.

There are rather convincing evidences of an improvement in the coke situation, both as to demand and a stiffening of prices. One independent producing interest has accepted an order for 100 cars of spot foundry coke, for which $5.25 is to be paid for shipments in open top cars and $5.50 for shipments in box cars. The same producer has sold 500 tons of spot furnace at $3.75 and a smaller tonnage at $3.90.

Other transactions in furnace coke are reported at $3.85 while the minimum for this grade is now believed to be $3.75. It is reported that the only recent sales below that figure have been of soft coke, disposed of for the purpose of clearing up yard accumulations with a view to getting plants in readiness for later and greater activity.

Inquiries for coke have become more frequent and have in many instances resulted in orders being closed. It is understood that a number of merchant operators are ready to resume activity if consumers manifest a willingness to meet their views as to price which the former hold should range from $4.00 to $4.10 per ton.

Expressing his views of the situation this morning one large producer said that he believed that the bottom had been touched and that the tendencies are now all in the direction of improvement, both as to demand and prices. Feverish activity is not anticipated but the feeling seems to have become general that the change for the better has already set in and will progress gradually.

OPERETTA MAKES HIT

The large audience showed its appreciation of the work of the students by generous applause. William Pritchard in the role of "Billy" the Middy, attached to the U. S. S. Dreadnaught, made a big hit. The stage decorations were effective. The story of the play centered around the annual regatta of the Lakeville Boat club.

STATE BANKS IN GOOD CONDITION, REPORT INDICATES

Net Loss of $3,816,000 in Three Months of Rapid Nation-wide Deflation Held Reassuring.

HARRISBURG, April 23—A net loss of $3,816,561.10 in the resources of all classes of state banking institutions during the period from December 31, 1920, to March 29, 1921, is disclosed in a compilation of figures prepared by John S. Fisher, state commissioner of banking, showing the condition of the institutions as revealed by reports made under the call of March 29 last.

As compared with the previous call state banks increased their resources $2,386,728.50 and savings banks increased $6,075,608, while trust companies fell off $12,228,991.49 and private banks decreased $49,907.26. Trust funds of state banks showed a growth of $1,777,000.96, of trust companies, $49,127,274.65 and of qualifying national banks $5,374,836.84, a total of $56,279,112.45.

The number of depositors in state banks increased 21,423 during the period between the calls and in trust companies 99,126, while the savings banks suffered a loss of 3,150 depositors. In the same time six new trust companies and seven new state banks were incorporated and opened. There are now 780 banking institutions under state supervision.

The condition shown in Mr. Fisher's statement declares, is very satisfactory and reassuring in view of the rapid deflation now going on. A statement issued by the comptroller of the currency, D. R. Crissinger, Mr. Fisher points out, shows the extent of this process throughout the country at large where from the time of the call of December 29, 1920, to that of February 21, 1921, the volume of resources of the 8,139 national banks of the country decreased $1,060,148,000.

It was said this afternoon a meeting of representatives of all the 24 companies named in the action would be called.

In the meantime it is understood each individual and company named in the suit will file an answer within the 30 days allowed by law for this purpose.

"PRINCESS OF POPPYLAND" IS PLEASING PLAY

Excellent Showing Made By High School Cast In Annual Production.

FINE CHORUS SINGING

Connellsville high school students demonstrated last night just what musical talent has been developed there in presenting "The Princess of Poppyland," a fanciful operetta. The big auditorium was filled to capacity for the play and rounds of applause followed dance and song numbers.

The entire play was laid in Poppyland, where the subjects of the king lived without working and where all happiness was governed by the magic casket "Beauty Sleep." A pretty story, with lovers, a villain and groups of court attendants and peasants, is worked out.

Miss Christine Davies, as the "princess" was the leading lady. She sang several exceptionally good solo numbers and also appeared in a duet with Paul Daniels, who played the part of Prince Widenwake, disguised as a student. He recovered the magic casket from Baron Insomnia, the villain, who had stolen it, and won the hand of the princess, bringing peace and happiness to Poppyland.

Robert Thomas sang the part of the king of Poppyland and he made an excellent ruler. As his right hand man he had the court chamberlain, played by Burdette Wylie. Another important figure was Herbert Ellis as the Honorable Dozey Fizzletop. Dozey's national anthem was "Beautiful, Beautiful Bed," a yawning song. He put it over so effectively that many in the audience found his yawns contagious.

Emerson Huey filled the role of Baron Insomnia, the villain, excellently. As his assistants he had "Pip-Pip," played by William Hardy, and "Honk-Honk," by Melvin Hoover. The trio gave the audience a number of laughs with their song, "Motoring Mottoes."

Ester Muir and Clotilda Love sang the parts of "Moon-Daisy" and "Cornflower," the favorite attendants of the princess. Their duet, "The Casket Legend," was the best musical number on the program.

Emma Weisgerber, as Columbia, attended by the North, East, South and West, representative of strength in unity, appeared in the closing act. She had a solo number that brought rounds of applause. William Mountain, Thomas Zimmerman, Ethel Findley and Eleanor Smith filled the roles of the North, South, East and West. Court pages were Frances Zimmerman, Mildred Elkes, Albert Bufano and Thomas Cummings.

There were three solo dances. The first by Cecelia Melnick depicted the spirit of happiness in Poppyland. A second was by Ruth Clark, between acts, and a third by Roselyn Pryce in conjunction with the gypsy chorus.

Miss Pauline Kooser was pianist. She is a student at the high school and gets much credit for her work in making the operetta a success.

Carl Anstine, instructor of music at the high school, directed the play. All the musical parts were coached by him. John Lehr, another member of the faculty, was in charge of the dramatic end of the play, and he had his proteges well coached.

Credit for the group dances goes to Miss Anne Mellon, physical instructor of the girls. Her ability in this line was demonstrated by the gypsy chorus. The dance, with its intricate steps and tambourine exercises, took the house and a full encore was demanded. The costumes of the members of the chorus were fantastic and the streamers on the tambourines added color. The dance itself could hardly be better produced on the professional stage.

Miss Mellon also directed the work of the poppy chorus and that composed of the court ladies and peasants.

The manual training and art departments also had a hand in the success of the operetta. Under the direction of A. R. Skomp, instructor, students of the former department cut out and built the background for the stage. This was attractively painted and decorated by Miss Mary Brickman, art teacher, and her students. The results were excellent and gave a fine setting for the play.

Misses Jean B. Armstrong and Florence Kimball, also faculty members, had charge of the costume work. It was fine. Nothing could have been more attractive than the poppy chorus, and all the dresses were prepared by the girls themselves.

German Politicians Raise Row With Cabinet Because Reparations Scheme Fails

HOUSE REFUSES TO OPEN U. S. DOORS TO POLITICAL REFUGEES

Immigration Bill, In Form Passed at Last Congress, Adopted and Goes to Senate.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 23—After rejecting an amendment seeking to open the doors of the United States to foreign political refugees, the House Friday passed the immigration restriction bill substantially in the same form it went through last session, only to be given a pocket veto. The bill now goes to the Senate, where Republican leaders said today it would be passed without delay.

The measure is designed to be operative over a period of 11 months and would limit the entry of aliens to three per cent of the number of nationals of any country in the United States at the time of the 1900 census.

Three amendments slightly modifying its provisions were adopted by the House, although it was said that they might be stricken out by the Senate. One would permit admission in excess of three per cent limit of all aliens clearly proving they had been subjected to religious persecution in their native land and were seeking refuge here solely to avoid such hardships.

The second would admit children of American citizens under 18 years of age, independent of the percentage of limitation, and the third would give preference to the families and relatives of American citizens and former service men honorably discharged from the army or navy, regardless of whether they had been naturalized, in determining the question of admissibility under the restricted total.

Foreign Minister Simons In Danger of Losing Offical Head.

NEW NOTE TO WASHINGTON

Contents of Reply to President Harding Refusing to Act as Arbitrator Not Made Public at Time; Rebuilding Northern France Is Proposed.

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 23.—A cabinet crisis appears imminent here as a result of the discontent aroused by the government's failure to consult the reichstag before asking President Harding of the United States to mediate between Germany and the Allies relative to reparations. The position of Dr. Walter Simons, foreign minister, is particularly imperiled.

LONDON, April 23.—Germany has sent to Washington a reply to the American note rejecting the role of arbitrator of the reparations question between Germany and the Allies, says a Central News dispatch from Berlin. The terms of the note were not divulged to party leaders up to the time it was dispatched at noon today and its contents will not be made known until later in the day. Leading politicians are declared to have been angry because members of the cabinet did not consult them before the original communication was sent to the American capital.

PARIS, April 23.—Germany instead of either agreeing or refusing to transfer the gold reserves of the Reichsbank to occupied territory in the Rhineland as the Allied reparations commission has demanded has offered to agree not to export or permit the exportation of gold from Germany before October 1, next.

LONDON, April 23.—Germany has sent a note to the British government reiterating her complete willingness to undertake the reconstruction of devastated France. The note, which came from the German foreign office, was delivered by the German ambassy to the British foreign office this morning. It follows:

"Germany is absolutely persuaded that it is unavoidably necessary for the purpose of restoring economic peace throughout the world that the territories devastated through the war should be reconstructed and restored. Until this is done there will be danger that feeling of hate will continue to exist among the nations concerned.

"Germany, therefore, declares herself once more to be entirely willing to cooperate in the reconstruction with all the means and strength at her disposal and to take into account in regard thereto in every individual case, each wish of the power concerned as far as is possible."

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Approval of the course of the American government with respect to the reparations controversy is believed to have been indicated by the Allied diplomats here before the despatch of Secretary Hughes' reply to the Berlin appeal that President Harding act as a mediator and fix the sum Germany must pay.

It became known today that the German request and the Americans' reply were discussed informally by the Secretary of State and the European ambassadors and it is understood that the foreign envoys were apprised of the character of the American reply in the interim between the receipt of the German memorandum and the sending of the response.

State Department officials were awaiting today the answer from Berlin which press dispatches from that city indicated was about to be made after being placed before the Reichstag.

Mortars and One-Pounders of The Howitzer Company to Be Mule-Drawn, Not Motorized

For the present, at least, the Howitzer Company of the 110th Infantry will be equipped with animal power for moving its guns and supplies, instead of being motorized as was planned earlier.

Captain George Bewick, Jr., has received the schedule of equipment and been instructed to forward his requisitions. The outfit will consist of six light trench mortars designed to be lifted from their trucks and placed on concrete bases when in action. These guns will throw either explosive or gas shells. In addition there will be three mounted one-pound guns with gun carts and three ammunition carts.

The animal equipment of the company will consist of five riding horses, two riding mules, four draft mules and two bicycles. Men of the company interpret this arrangement to mean that the first sergeant and the four duty sergeants will be mounted on the riding horses, leaving the two riding mules for the use of Captain Bewick and Lieutenant Marietta. In this connection it is proper to explain that instructions sustaining this view of the matter have not been received; neither is it explained that Mess Sergeant Rogers and Corporal Herbert Ellis, company clerk, will be assigned to the two bicycles. The seven corporals to be selected for the outfit may have something to say about this, under that paragraph of "general orders" which provides that, "In all cases not covered by instructions, call the corporal of the guard."

The strength of the company as shown by the official schedule will be two officers and 68 men, all of whom will be armed with pistols.

ARTICLE 10.

The miracle of wireless made it possible for the United States to fight a war on the other side of the world without losing contact with her soldiers and ships for longer than three hours out of any 24.

Measuring distance in terms of space, Washington was separated by 3,000 miles of water from the fighting forces of the United States in France.

But measuring distance in terms of time, Washington was in closer touch with its army of the Meuse-Argonne in 1917-18 than it was with the army of the Potomac in 1861-65.

From one room in the navy department—the transocean room, we called it—we could communicate with almost any country in western Europe.

This room had direct connection with the high-power sending stations at Annapolis, Sayville, L. I., and New Brunswick and Tuckerton, N. J. Messages flung from these stations were picked up in France and speeded on over a net work of land wires and telephones to any point where it was possible to place a receiving instrument—from the rear areas to the trenches.

What Might Have Happened.

The tremendous advantage afforded by this means of communication may be the better appreciated by postulating two "ifs"—

If the submarine telegraph had been the only method of immediate communication and—

If the Germans had cut the cables—

What would have happened?

Nobody can say what might have happened. It would have been a po

But in a very wonderful way he is restored to full strength and turns toward new conquests in the realm of music.

THE ORPHEUM.

"THE MARK OF ZORRO," in which Douglas Fairbanks, supported by a wonderful cast, is seen in a dual role, is being presented today. As years passed, their posterity perpetuated their mode of life and though conditions may change, their history will never remain extinct.

All other services and Sunday school in the Cameron school building, near the Carnegie library on South Pittsburg street. Public worship at 11 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. In the morning the principal address will be by Mrs. C. H. Beall on "Egyptian Superstitions." Mrs. Beall was formerly on the mission field. The pastor will make an important statement at this service bearing on the future plans of this church. In the evening the pastor's subject will be "Spiritualism," a very important subject which has been much in public thought in recent years, especially since the war. The Epworth League meets at 6:30 P. M. Subject, "Self Control and How to Get It."

FIRST U. P.—600 South Pittsburg street, Francis J. Scott, pastor. Sunday school at 9:45. Preaching at 11 and 7:30. The morning sermon will be on the subject of "Baptism." This will be the fourth sermon on this subject. In two weeks from this next Sunday the pastor will preach the closing sermon of the series. That message will show the right of children to be baptized. The Bible is the best work on the subject of baptism. It is to be regretted that this ordinance is held in light esteem by any one who professes to be a follower of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is as important as the Lord's Supper. The Christ instituted both and each for a specific purpose. This Sunday morning's sermon will be a discussion on "Does Baptism Symbolize the Burial of Jesus?" The evening sermon is on the subject "Law Breaking in Connellsville." A prevalent antipathy to law is the gravest sign of these troublesome times. Everywhere there is an apparent revolt against authority. Who is to blame for so much lawlessness in our city? What is the primary function of law? If interested in better conditions here, come and hear.

EVANGELICAL—South Connellsville, J. O. Bishop pastor. Sunday school at 9:30. Morning worship at 10:30. Mass meeting at 2:30 P. M. Y. P. A. at 6:45, Kelly Corvin, leader. Evangelistic meeting at 7:30. Evangelist W. L. Martin will preach three sermons on Sunday on the following subjects. Morning, "Christian Perfection; Is It Obtainable In This Life?" Afternoon, "The Second Coming, When, How, Why?" Evening, "America Invaded By a Triple Alliance." The Rev. Martin is one of the leading pastor evangelists of the Evangelical church. A master of large assemblies, a leader of men. His sermons are doctrinal, educational, inspirational, a burning appeal to the whole man. You should hear him especially on the above subjects. Prof. Geo. D. Rapp is one of the great song leaders of the day, and will have charge of the music, assisted by his wife. Special vocal and instrumental numbers are rendered at every service. All are invited to the services. The attention of the public is especially directed to the afternoon service. Adults are particularly requested to attend. Come early and make sure of getting a seat. In the evening the evangelist will speak along the line of religious education. Teachers and officers are especially invited to the evening service.

UNITED BRETHREN — Fairview, Sunday school at 10 A. M., followed by preaching service at 11. Mount Olive Sunday school at 10 A. M. Christian Endeavor at 7:30 P. M. Preaching service at 8 P. M. Young People's League, 3:45. Open air services, 7:15. Special meeting in the hall conducted by Mrs. Staff-Captain Nellie Maltby of Pittsburg who is here doing four days of Evangelistic meetings in the Salvation Army hall.

TRINITY EPISCOPAL — Parish house, Prospect street and Fairview avenue, Frederic Welham, rector. Every Sunday morning of the month at 11 o'clock except the third Sunday. Third Sunday evening of the month at 7:45. Church school at 10 o'clock.

Phillips of Otterbein college, Westerville, O., will speak in the evening. Come and hear him, strangers are welcome. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening at 7:30. If you are not going elsewhere suppose you come and try our services. We will do thee good. Look in on us once. J. S. Showers, pastor.

MONTH OF RECORD-BREAKING BARGAINS

Mostly everyone is familiar with conditions that have existed during the past few months. Stores all over the country—great and small—withheld orders. Mills and factories faced shut-downs. They clamored for orders and there WERE NO ORDERS. That was the moment for the K. & B. store to STEP IN. With our eyes on this great SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY SALE with our hands full of ready CASH—we were ready and willing to place orders running into thousands upon thousands of Dollars. What was the result? Great mills competed with each other for our business. They were actually "hungry for the orders" and were willing to make every concession to attract our business. We closed purchases that will "open the eyes" of you all. They will be revealed on the Opening Day of this great Sale—MONDAY, May 2nd.

This is our summons for you to plan—to look over your needs—to post yourself on train schedules—and decide to come to Pittsburgh on the Opening Day of the Sale! You will SAVE as never before—your train fare will be earned many times over in the great savings that await you.

SATURDAY EVE'G, APRIL 23, 1921.

GIVING FORCE TO "ENFORCEMENT."

In connection with the mayor's proclamation fixing the week of May 2 as "Clean-Up Week," the announcement is made that the law relating to the removal of fly and disease breeding nests and accumulations of every kind detrimental to the public health, will be rigidly enforced.

This announcement is made as regularly as the attention of householders is called to the necessity for an annual renovation of their premises, but the experience has been that it is just as regularly forgotten. While the large majority of citizens do not need to be told that they should observe all the requirements laid down by the health authorities here and there in the city will always be found a few who pay absolutely no attention to proclamations, ordinances laws or regulations of any kind touching these matters. With a willful disregard of the rights of their neighbors and the public generally they persist in violations and are permitted to get away with it.

The practice of burning house refuse containing a certain amount of garbage material, such as orange rinds, banana peels and other vegetable matter in the alleys and throwing dishwater into the streets, sometimes on brick paving, is persisted in by some people who are presumed to know better. Partially burned matter remains in the alleys to attract flies and to form a possible disease-breeding source. Pieces of paper and ashes are blown over adjoining lawns and the whole neighboring soon acquires an unsightly appearance.

It is wholly unfair to the law-respecting citizens who need no urging to keep their premises clean, and who strictly observe all the sanitary regulations in the interest of their own and the public's welfare that even one person in the city should be allowed to make a dumping ground of any alley or street for any kind of material which the laws and ordinances require to be disposed of without endangering the public health or causing inconvenience or annoyance to neighbors.

If the authorities keep diligent watch the few violators of this class can be detected. When found they should be made to suffer the penalties. Then, and not until then will the warning about rigid enforcement of the law have a real meaning and serve a real purpose.

PROPRIETY IN SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENTS.

No public entertainments have been or can be staged in Connellsville that are assured of a more liberal patronage than those presented by the students of the high school. They have an interest for school patrons and fellow students not possible to be aroused by any imported talent.

For these reasons, too great care cannot be exercised in providing features to which no objections can be offered even by those mothers, fathers and older sisters and brothers who will not deny they have certain so-called old-fashioned notions of propriety in school entertainments.

They, therefore, are of the opinion that school theatrical productions are not made elevating in their influences, or acceptable to many patrons, by the introduction of solo dances which more properly belong to entertainments of a different class.

"Y" MEMBERSHIP.

The annual report of the Baltimore & Ohio Y. M. C. A. during the past 11 months shows such an extent and variety of activities in behalf of young men who have availed themselves of the facilities provided that the campaign to secure new members and renewals should start off next week with vigor and enthusiasm.

While primarily intended for the accommodation of employes of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad the "Y" membership is not limited to this class of young men nor are its entertainment, recreation and athletic features restricted to them. The institution is open to all young men of the city. They should be glad of the opportunity they have to secure membership, hence willing to add zest to the contest between the opposing membership teams by giving their names to the first solicitor who approaches them.

A maintenance of way crew which can keep a section of railroad in the best condition under the limited appropriations at its disposal deserves a prize and is honored as well.

The Big League contests will be of but secondary interest in Connellsville next week when the "Y" membership league gets into action.

Spreading the propaganda of patriotism in the schools by the G. A. R. veterans is a splendid preparation for the later mission of the school children in spreading flowers on the graves of the soldiers.

Scientific Plan of Lending

THE Amortization Mortgage Company lends only on the Amortization Plan, which provides for the periodical repayment of a sufficient portion of the principal debt to extinguish it at its maturity. As a definite portion of the principal debt is repayable half-yearly, the borrower's debt accordingly grows less, and the margin of security greater, thereby insuring safety for investors in the Company's securities.

BALL DIAMOND IN POOR SHAPE; NEEDS REPAIRS

The Connellsville baseball club will faces a big expense in putting Fayette Field into shape for the season. Although the diamond is now in better condition than it was before the Independents played there last year, it is far from being what the club is desirous of having.

The infield needs a scraping and levelling. This will require time and labor in addition to the rolling. The club intends to spend some money for these details, however, and May 21 should see the diamond looking better and being faster than ever before.

Plans are going ahead for the booster day which will be held on that date.

* * * *

While everyone else is planning to get ready to play ball the Yough Valley Independents are rapidly improving, regular practice having been started some time ago.

The Y. M. C. A. Juniors held their first practice on Fayette Field yesterday evening. The candidates will again report there on Monday evening. The railroad "Y" aggregation is one team that may claim the field, it is the property of the Baltimore & Ohio.

Pittsburg added another victory yesterday, defeating the Cincinnati Redlegs 6-1. The Buccaneers got to Luque, who held them powerless on opening day in Cincinnati, and touched him for hits that counted.

James M. Southard, an assistant secretary of the Baltimore & Ohio "Y" attended the game in Pittsburg yesterday.

Babe Ruth slammed out his fourth homer of the season yesterday against Philadelphia but the Yankees lost, 11-4 to Philadelphia.

Gold Medal Glenwood
The Range That Really Saves

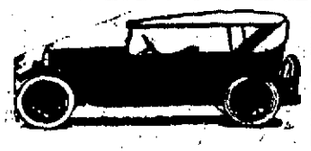

There are two separate ovens—one for coal and one for gas. Both ovens may be used at one time—or either may be used singly. In addition to the two baking ovens, there is a gas broiler oven. There is room on the coal and gas sections, at the top, for NINE large utensils. You can do all of your cooking at one time. You can do it better—with less waste and less work. You have coal for Winter, to keep the kitchen warm and comfortable; and gas for Summer, to keep the kitchen cool.

The illustration below shows the wonderful pearl grey porcelain enamel finish—so neat and attractive. By simply passing a damp cloth over the surface you are able to clean your range instantly. No more soiled hands, no more dust and smut. It banishes the old time task of blacking the range. You owe it to yourself to enjoy the comfort and convenience of the Gold Medal Glenwood range.

PAIGE
The Most Beautiful Car in America

The One True Test

The one sure way to determine actual motor car value is by a thorough, exhaustive demonstration.

In the show room, you can tell at a glance whether a car satisfies your artistic demands. The next step, then, is to get out on the road and discover what lies under the hood. Power, Speed and Endurance are qualities of action that only a ride can establish.

We suggest just this course in judging any Paige 6-66 model. We go one step farther, however, and invite you to compare it with any other car—at any price—on the American market. Take the comparative demonstrations first. Then inspect the price tags.

The Paige-Daytona model, remember, is the stock car speed champion of the world. And the motor that you will find under a 6-66 hood belongs to Paige and Paige alone. Don't forget that.

BULL-DOG DRUMMOND

The Adventures of A Demobilized Officer Who Found Peace Dull

CYRIL McNEILE

"Holy smoke! laddie," he murmured, "that man Peterson ought to be on the committee here. Verily, I believe, he could galvanise the staff into some semblance of activity."

"Did you order anything, sir?" A waiter paused beside him.

"No," murmured Drummond, "but I will rectify the omission. Another large tankard of ale."

The waiter departed, and Hugh picked up the paper again.

"We understand," he murmured gently to himself, "that Mr. Potts, who has recently been indisposed, has returned to the Carlton."

Now that's very interesting.

He lit a cigarette and lay back in his chair. It was under the impression that Mr. Potts was safely tucked up in bed, consuming semolina pudding, at Goring. It requires elucidation."

"I beg your pardon, sir," remarked the waiter, placing the beer on the table beside him.

"You needn't," returned Hugh. "Up to date you have justified my fondest expectations. And as a further proof of my good will I would like you to go me a trunk call—3 X Goring."

A few minutes later he was in the telephone box.

"Peter, I have seldom been so glad to hear your voice. Is all well? Good. Don't mention any names. Our guest is there, is he? Open on strike against stewed milk puddings, you say. Coax him, Peter. Make a home like a dungeon and he'll think it's caviare. Have you seen the papers? There are interesting doings in Belfast, which concern us rather intimately. I'll be there later, and we'll have a powwow."

He hung up the receiver and stepped out of the box.

"I say," he remarked to a man who was looking at the tape machine outside, "the paper says a blighter is somewhere and you know, he's somewhere else—what would you do?"

"Up to date in such cases I have always shot the editor," murmured Algy Longworth. "Come and feed."

"You're so helpful, Algy. A perfect rock of strength. Do you want a job?"

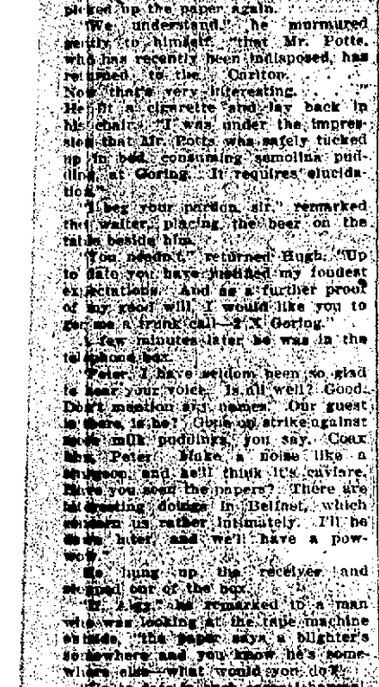

"What sort of a job?" demanded the other suspiciously.

"Oh, not work, dear old boy. I—a leisure man—you know me better than that, surely!"

"People are so funny nowadays," returned Longworth gloomily. "What is this job?"

Together the two men strolled into the luncheon-room, and long after the cheese had been finished, Algy Longworth was still listening in silence to his companion.

"My dear old bean," he murmured ecstatically as Hugh finished, "my very dear old bean. I think it's the most priceless thing I ever heard. Enroll me as a member of the band. And, incidentally, Toby Sinclair is running amuck in circles asking for trouble. Let's go and find him this afternoon, Algy," said Hugh rising. "And tell him to keep his mouth shut. I'd come with you, but it occurs to me that the wretched Potts, bathed in tears at the Carlton, is in need of sympathy. So long, old dear. You'll hear from me in a day or two."

"My Dear Old Bean," He Murmured Ecstatically as Hugh Finished, "My Very Dear Old Bean."

Drummond sauntered along Pall-Mall. He had told Longworth more or less on the spur of the moment, knowing that gentleman's capabilities in a crisis. Under a cloak of assumed flippancy he concealed an iron nerve which had never yet failed him; and, in spite of the fact that he wore an entirely unnecessary eye-glass, he could see further into a brick wall than most of the people who called him a fool.

It was his suggestion of telling Toby Sinclair that caused the smile. For it had started a train of thought in Drummond's mind which seemed to him to be good. If Sinclair—why not two or three more equally trusty sportsmen? Why not a gang of the boys?

Toby possessed a V. C., and a good one—for there are grades of the V. C., and those grades are appreciated to a nicety by the recipient's brother officers if not by the general public. The show would fit Toby like a glove.

Then there was Ted Jerningham, who combined the roles of an amateur actor of more than average merit with an ability to hit anything at any range with every conceivable type of firearm. And Jerry Seymour in the Flying corps. . . . Not a bad thing to have a flying man—up one's sleeve. . . . And possibly some one versed in the ways of tanks might come in handy. . . .

The smile broadened to a grin; surely life was very good. And then the grin faded, and something suspiciously like a frown took its place. For he had arrived at the Carlton, and reality had come back to him.

"Mr. Potts will see no one, sir," remarked the man to whom he addressed his question. "You are about the twentieth gentleman who has been here already today."

Hugh had expected this, and smiled genially.

"Precisely, my stout fellow," he remarked, "but I'll lay a small amount of money that they were newspaper men. Now, I'm not. And I think that if you will have this note delivered to Mr. Potts, he will see me."

He sat down at a table, and drew a sheet of paper toward him. Two facts were certain: First, that the man upstairs was not the real Potts; second, that he was one of Peterson's gang. The difficulty was to know exactly how to word the note. There might be some mystic pass-word, the omission of which would prove him an impostor at once. At length he took a pen and wrote rapidly; he would have to chance it.

"Urgent. A message from headquarters."

He sealed the envelope and handed it with the necessary five shillings for postage to the man. Then he sat down to wait. After what seemed an interminable delay he saw the messenger crossing the lounge.

"Mr. Potts will see you, sir."

Hugh followed his guide along a corridor, and paused outside a door while he went into a room. He heard a murmur of voices, and then the man reappeared.

"This way, sir," he said, and Hugh stepped inside, to stop with an involuntary gasp of surprise. The man seated in the chair was Potts, to all intents and purposes. The likeness was extraordinary, and had he not known that the real article was at Goring he would have been completely deceived himself.

The man waited till the door was closed; then he rose and stepped forward suspiciously.

"I don't know you," he said. "Who are you?"

"Since when has every one employed at headquarters known one another?" Drummond returned guardedly. "And, incidentally, your likeness to our lamented friend is wonderful. It very nearly deceived even me."

The man, not ill-pleased, gave a short laugh.

"It'll pass, I think. But it's risky. These cursed reporters have been badgering the whole morning. . . . And if his wife or somebody comes over, what then? It wasn't like Rosca to bungle in Belfast. He's never left a clue before, and he had plenty of time to do the job properly."

"A name inside a breast-pocket might easily be overlooked," remarked Hugh, seizing the obvious clue.

"Are you making excuses for him?" snarled the other. "He's failed, and failure is death. Such is our rule. Would you have it altered?"

"Most certainly not. The issues are far too great for any weakness. . . ."

"You're right, my friend—you're right. Long live the Brotherhood." He stared out of the window with smouldering eyes, and Hugh preserved a discreet silence. Then suddenly the other broke out again. . . . "Have they killed that insolent puppy of a soldier yet?"

"Not yet," murmured Hugh mildly.

"They must find the American at once." The man thumped the table emphatically. "It was important before—at least his money was. Now with this blunder—it's vital."

"Precisely," said Hugh. "Precisely."

"I've already interviewed one man from Scotland Yard, but every hour increases the danger. However, you have a message for me. What is it?"

Hugh rose and casually picked up his hat. He had got more out of the interview than he had hoped for, and there was nothing to be gained by prolonging it. But it struck him that Mr. Potts' impersonator was a man of unpleasant disposition, and that tactically a flanking movement to the door was indicated. And, being of an open nature himself, it is possible that the real state of affairs showed for a moment on his face. Be that as it may, something suddenly aroused the other's suspicions, and with a snarl of fury he sprang past Hugh to the door.

"Who are you?" He spat the words out venomously, at the same time whipping an ugly-looking knife out of his pocket.

Hugh replaced his hat and stick on the table and grinned gently.

"I am the insolent puppy of a soldier, dear old bird," he remarked, watching the other warily. "And if I was you I'd put the toothpick away."

"You might hurt yourself—"

As he spoke he was edging, little by little, toward the other man, who crouched snarling by the door. His eyes, grim and determined, never left the other's face; his hands, apparently hanging listless by his sides, were tingling with the joy of what he knew was coming.

"And the penalty of failure is death, isn't it, dear one?" He spoke almost dreamily; but not for an instant did his attention relax. Almost imperceptibly, he crept toward the other man, talking gently.

"Such is your rule. And I think you have failed, haven't you, you unpleasant specimen of humanity? How will they kill you, I wonder?"

It was at that moment that the man made his mistake. He looked away; only for a moment—but he looked away. Just as a cat's nerves give after a while and it looks round for an avenue of escape, so did the crouching man take his eyes from Hugh. And quick as any dog, Hugh sprang.

FORDSON

TRADEMARK

There is every reason in the world why every farmer should buy a Fordson Tractor, while there is not a single reason in the world why a farmer should not buy a Fordson Tractor.

In the claims we make for the Fordson Tractor as being the superior farm Tractor, there is nothing of boasting. Our claims are based upon demonstrated facts. In every sensible test that has been made (and we don't believe in any jockeying or technical tests) but the real common sense work on the farm—the work the Tractor was intended to accomplish—we say, in all such tests the Fordson has stood head and shoulders above all competing Tractors. And this is best proven in the fact that while there are about three hundred thousand farm Tractors in use in the United States today, and while Tractors have been sold to farmers for twenty years, and while the Fordson Tractor has only been on the market two years, more than one-third of all the Tractors in use in the United States are Fordson Tractors.

Now you can't upset a fact. You can't break away from the established truth, and there it is—out of three hundred thousand Tractors, one hundred thousand are Fordsons, and there are probably some fifty different makes of Tractors on the market. Just let your common sense consider these facts. "Figs are not plucked from thistle bushes, nor plums from thorn trees."

The Fordson Tractor has the necessary power. It is economical in operation. It is flexible in control and operation. It is simple in design, and it is sturdily built of the best iron and steel. It is the product of the genius of Henry Ford and it wasn't placed on the market until Henry Ford had tested it, and tested it, before he asked the farmers to buy it. It is no idle faith that in the Fordson Tractor Henry Ford has given to mankind one of the greatest benefits which has ever come to civilized man.

Now we solicit every farmer to buy one or more Fordsons. Come in and see them. Come in and let us tell you more than we can in an advertisement. Let us demonstrate to you. Let us put it to every test that you ask. The Tractor is just as necessary for the farmer as water is in the house. Come in. Look over the Fordson. Test it. Don't take any chances. Don't experiment. Supply your farm with the Tractor of established value.

WIRELESS WAS BIG FACTOR IN HELPING TO WIN WORLD WAR

tastically dangerous trial for Washington and the American people.

Things moved so quickly and complete transformations occurred with such amazing suddenness, that telegraphic isolation from Europe for 24 hours might have been fraught with most serious consequences. There were occasions when critical questions came up, and prompt decisions were required. It was of supreme importance then that there should be direct, instantaneous and uninterrupted communication between Washington and London or Paris or Chaumont, or any other of the vital centers of control and direction.

As a matter of fact the Germans did cut some of the cables, but that was the least of our worries once we had developed a complete system of wireless communication.

Marvelous System Perfected.

Had the war run into the year 1919 we would have had in operation the most marvelous instrumentality for gathering and disseminating intelligence that human genius has yet conceived.

Planned in 1917, this greatest of wireless plants was approaching completion when hostilities ended. Work was then discontinued, but later was resumed and completed last year.

The United States navy undertook the erection of the wireless station and structure at Croix d'Hins, near Bordeaux, and named the completed plant the La Fayette.

It is today, and is likely to be for years to come, the most powerful radio system in existence. When it was put into operation the following radiogram, addressed to me, came vibrating into the transocean room of the navy department:—

"This is the first wireless message to be heard around the world, and marks a milestone on the road of scientific achievement. La Fayette Radio Station."

Only One in the World.

The message is no empty boast. It states a simple fact, but a fact of which every American may be proud. The La Fayette radio station is the only radio station in the world that can belt the globe with its electrified ether waves.

An inscription has been placed upon the main building of the plant, the exact words of which I will give you presently, but I sometimes think a briefer inscription might have been better. For example:

"I have annihilated distance. I have made the remotest corner of the world my next door neighbor."

There is no spot anywhere on the earth's surface where, if a high power station existed, a message sent from the La Fayette station would not be instantly received.

France gave America the immortal work of Bartholdi—"Liberty Enlightening the World!" America has given France, through the genius and enterprise of her navy, a fin de siecle variation on the same theme.

When the tidings of human progress, of commerce and industry and science and politics flash from La Fayette to the high power stations of two hemispheres, in a very real and significant sense it is "Liberty Enlightening the World."

Towers 852 Feet High.

La Fayette station consists of eight lofty towers, on dumense concrete foundations, arranged in two rows, 1,320 feet apart.

Each tower rises to a height of 852 feet, nearly 300 feet higher than the Washington monument.

The system affords an antenna area of 7,267,200 square feet, far larger than that of any other radio station. The longitude antenna wires are bronze cables, supported by what the wireless people call triatics. The latter stretch across the aisle formed by the two rows of towers. The antenna wires are 600 feet above the ground.

Signals received from La Fayette at Cavite, San Francisco, the Panama Canal zone and Washington during the tests, proved to be three to eight times as strong as those of other high power stations at like distances.

When the plant was finished, and the tests had demonstrated the success of what we had set out to do, we prepared a tablet and placed it on the main building, with the following inscription:

"Conceived for the purpose of insuring adequate and uninterrupted trans-Atlantic communication facilities between the American expeditionary forces engaged in the world war and the government of the United States of America.

"Erected by the United States Navy in conjunction with and for the government of France."

Robs Sea of Loneliness.

One of the great achievements of wireless has been to rob the sea of its loneliness, and of much of its old-time peril. Before Marconi worked his miracle a ship that had been driven from traveled ocean lanes by storm, whose propeller shaft had broken, or whose engine had gone out of business, might lie for days unseen and unable to communicate with any source of help. Helpless to steer a course, and at the mercy of wave and wind, it might be wrecked and sunk and none left to tell its story. Such things have not been infrequent in the annals of the sea.

Only those who have been to sea know the sense of loneliness, of utter isolation, of remoteness from any source of help which one feels when, standing on deck or bridge and looking around the full circle of the unbroken horizon, one sees nothing, absolutely nothing, but water—a vast monotony of undulating water.

And the remoteness was as hopeless and as helpless, as it felt, until wireless came.

Now, if a ship gets into difficulty it needs help it splutters its S. O. S. from its wireless, confident that it will be heard and answered.

Talked With All Ships.

During the war we talked to all our ships, anywhere, whenever we had anything to say, and they talked to one another. We sent them submarine warnings and routings and all kinds of information and orders. Often we would send, simultaneously, as many as fifty or sixty messages to all kinds of vessels and they would be picked up by them without difficulty.

At the same time we were sending our stations along the coast were intercepting every word or signal sent out by ships at sea. Sometimes "the air was full of them," as the operators said.

The wireless operator in his little room had ears for the world, and all the world spoke to him. There came to him its cries, its warnings, its appeals, sometimes its curses, and sometimes even its laughter. Many a secret he heard—and kept.

But the message which never failed to send a thrill through his soul was "Allo, S. O. S." That call vibrating through the ether meant that somewhere an American or Allied vessel was being attacked by a U-boat. Every naval vessel which heard it went hurrying at once to the scene of its origin.

Air Full of Distress Cries.

Sometimes in the war zone the air seemed full of "Allos." Nearing the European coast a ship could catch the wireless for hundreds of miles. One moment it might hear a distress signal from some vessel off Ireland, and the next from some craft being attacked in the Bay of Biscay.

Morale was stimulated and helped tremendously by wireless. Our wireless news service was greatly appreciated by the men at sea. It kept them almost as well informed as to what was happening at home, and as to the vital happenings in other parts of the world, as if they had been able to get the last edition of the home town paper.

At 10 o'clock each night ships "cleared" for the Navy Press, and we gave out a complete summary of the news of America.

Perhaps one of the most interesting and useful things we did with wireless was to establish radio compass station, which by listening to the direction from which a wave length came with greatest force, could determine a ship's position at sea.

Great Help to Ships.

These stations of course were originally erected as a means of locating submarines, and in this work they proved so successful that the U-boats hardly dared use their wireless off our coast. Since they finished their U-boat job, however, they have proved of the greatest value to navigation. There are some 70 of them on the Atlantic, Pacific and gulf coasts, and any ship that becomes lost in fog, or otherwise confused as to its reckoning, can obtain by wireless from the radio compass its exact position. If it is in dangerous waters it will be given sailing directions which will enable it to steer safely into port.

Think of what this would have meant to Columbus, or Magellan, or Captain Cook!

Not a few inventions which were designed specifically for war use are now proving of applicable value to the ways and needs of peace, but I doubt if any of them will do more for the saving of life and the facilitating of human intercourse and traffic than the radio compass.

Sometimes I think the achievements of wireless and its still undeveloped possibilities mark the "farthest north" of human adventure in the realm of experiment and research.

Long Way from Fire Signals.

Assuredly it is a long road the race has traveled since the days when the tribesmen of Great Britain signalled to each other by hill-top fires and the aboriginal 100 per cent American communicated with those who acknowledged the same totem by means of a code written in wavering columns of smoke.

The news of victory at Marathon was carried back to Athens by Pheidippides, who, running with sustained speed the 26 miles from battlefield to capital, fell dead from exhaustion with the cry on his lips, "Rejoice, we conquer."

When Wellington defeated Napoleon at Waterloo it was nearly 36 hours before London heard the glad tidings. When the armistice was signed in 1918 Washington had the news in a few minutes.

Poems have been written about the famous ride of Paul Revere and the carrying of the good news from Ghent.

Elbert Hubbard immortalized the youth who took a message to Garbia.

It will take a combination of Longfellow and Browning and Elbert Hubbard to pay a just tribute to wireless and its heroes.
